

Global Jewish Peoplehood
Learning Series.

What is Your Story?

Sharon Silverman

WHAT IS YOUR STORY?

THINK

Take a moment and think of your personal story. If you had to write the first line of your story, what would that be? Use the space below to finish this sentence, "My story begins....."

LEARN

Each of us has our own story. Think about the story of your ancestors, maybe who they were and where they came from. In small groups, you will have the chance to share about your family story. Please split into groups of 3-5 people and answer the questions below:

1. What is your family's story? (feel free to use a map to illustrate your family's journey)
 - a. Did you learn anything new?
 - b. Did anything you learned surprise you?
2. How does telling the story of your family impact your personal story?

Large Group Debrief:

1. What came up in your small group conversations?
2. How does learning the story of your family impact your personal story?
3. What is one take-away you have from this activity/conversation?

DO!

"Without understanding there is no knowledge, and without knowledge no understanding." ~ Avot 3:17

Take a moment and return to the beginning prompt. If you had another chance to write the first line of your personal story, what would you write? Using the space below to finish this sentence, "My story begins...."

Hillel
International